Petrarca's manuscripts between Gotha and Erfurt

Among the works of Petrarca (1304–1374) the De remediis utriusque fortune is one of the most important, but despite its wide fortune which continued in the 17th century it hasn't yet any critical edition. The Amplonianische Bibliothek owns one of the oldest copies of the treatise (1395). This paper will focus on the textual relations between some chapters of the De remediis concerning the education of children and the letter Familiaris VII 17, conserved in the manuscript now in Gotha, Chart. A 869.

Dr. Giulia Perucchi has studied Middle-Latin and Humanist Philology in the Universities of Florence and Messina (Italy). She is working on the Latin works by Petrarca, and is mainly interested in the manuscript tradition of the De remediis utriusque fortune. In her Ph-D dissertation she edited the annotations by Petrarca on Pliny the Elder's Naturalis historia. She is a Stipendiatin in the Forschungszentrum in Gotha since July 2013.
